I am a young enthusiastic, concept-driven designer ready to take the next step in Graphic Design, learning new skills that I can apply in increasingly creative ways. I have a passion for typography and language and I am eager to further this and myself creatively. I seek to produce well-executed conceptual design with a focus on typography and an attention to detail. I am an interested and passionate person that seeks inspiration from everywhere and I strive to reflect this in the design I produce. I look forward to the new challenges that working as a designer will bring and I am eager to tackle a new and diverse range of projects.

Experience/Work Experience:

Freelance Graphic Design

I have worked on several freelance projects acquired from friends and family, online (through my online portfolio), and projects for tutors and lecturers at my university. These projects ranging from invitations to editorial spreads and mastheads for an independent magazine as well as an identity for an in house design agency at my previous college have provided some great insight into working for commercial clients. I have also recently been asked by the BA Fine Art course to produce their end of year exhibition catalogue.

Self-Initiated Work

From the end of the first year of my degree I have designed and sold typographic T-shirts as an extra source of income while studying. This was done so I could concentrate and spend far more time on my design and still have a source of income coming in. In addition I have entered several awards competitions such as D&AD and ISTD, both of which have been approved for entry by university tutors.

University Projects

Over the past three years I have worked on numerous university projects all of which helped my design and my knowledge of the design process. Working alongside other creative people who share the same passion for design as do has been great and is something that I hope will continue after graduation. A portfolio of the work produced here is available at www.robmoxon.co.uk

Miscellaneous

I have been the University's D&AD representative for the past two years. I have really enjoyed this and it has provided some great opportunities to meet students from other universities as well as designers while judging the work. In the first year of my ND in Graphic Design at Wakefield College I was invited to show my work at an awards competition for degree students. This was a great chance to look around an actual design studio as well as the chance to show my portfolio to some of Yorkshire's leading creative designers.
